"If I didn't have these groups to come to, I would either be in jail or dead. Losing my best friend, my brother, crushed me and having a place to talk about it and say hard stuff let me know I am not alone."

GETTING STARTED

Parents and caregivers can contact us directly to talk about joining a support group. If appropriate, we will schedule a family intake appointment, during which we will talk about relevant family history, current family needs, and reactions to the death.

WHEN SHOULD I CALL?

Some families contact us immediately after a death, while others come to us months or even years later. We welcome families to contact us at any time they feel ready.

Cork's Place is a safe and caring environment staffed by professionals and trained volunteers.

"Cork's Place is comfort. I love creating art, making friends with other kids like me and talking about my dad gives me hope. Me and my mom can actually talk about the good and bad memories we have about dad. That wouldn't have happened without this kind of support."

- Cork's Place Child

"Cork's Place provided the support we didn't even know we needed after losing my mother 5 years ago. Losing my husband this year was unexpected and without the support and guidance my children and myself receive from this special place, we would not have known how to cope or grieve properly with this incredible loss. You all have been a gift to me and my children."
